

SRI LANKA LAW COLLEGE

Academic Misconduct

The overarching obligation of any student at the Sri Lanka Law College is to act honestly, ethically and in the best interest of the institution. Under Rule 60 of the Rules of the Council of Legal Education, it is a serious academic crime to engage in academic misconduct.

Any student/s involved in such conduct can be severely penalized (including being expelled from Law College) by the Council of Legal Education.

Rule 60: “Candidates on entering the Examination room shall give up to the Supervisor or Supervisors all the books and papers in their immediate possession at that time. After the announcement of the Examination, any candidate found talking to another, or copying from or using notes or books or having the same in their possession shall be instantly expelled from the room by the Supervisor or Supervisors, and his case reported to the Principal who shall bring it to the notice of the Council.”
